THE BRIDGES.

Need of Citizen Inspector to Superintend Construction.

Letter of Approval—Sturdy Denial—The Glorious Rain—Lecture Tonight—And Further Fragments of Fact and Fancy.

A Good Suggestion.

W. H. SHUPP, the Bridge street dealer in agricultural implements, yesterday accented a GAZETTE reporter with the exclamation, "I thought the newspapers claimed to be watchful of the people's interests, that you were even on the alert, and when you saw danger coming you raised your voice, cried aloud, and spared not." The reporter of course wished to know what new enemy was now in the field, what interest of the people was menaced with danger. Mr. Shupp went on to say that there was one matter in connection with building the bridges, which had been recently let, that seemed to him of vital importance, though public attention had not been called to it. It was absolutely necessary that the construction of the bridges should be under the supervision of some of our citizens—men who not only had the interest of the community at heart because their own interests were located here, but who had lived here long enough to be familiar with our streams, and to know the way in which they act when high water comes on. If a man can design a good looking house is no sign that he is able to erect a bridge over our raging and shifting rivers. The architect that planned the bridge over the Gallinas, planned the Plaza hotel, the First National bank and many other of our best and most imposing buildings. Still, he was very far from qualified to construct a bridge in New Mexico, as is shown by the present bridge, which speaks for itself. When it was built, Mr. Shupp spoke to the architect, but was curiously informed that people had better attend to matters which they understood. It turned out, though, in a very short time that the architect was the one who did not understand. The tax payers of the county cannot afford a second experience of the same kind. They must see that someone superintends the building who knows something about our rivers. The contract stipulates that the bridges shall not be received till they have been inspected and reported upon favorably by a committee of three taxpayers. Unfortunately this inspection is after they have been completed, and when it will be of but little service. No one can tell from examining a bridge after it is built, what they can tell by examining it while it is building. The only way to prevent a repetition of the experience already had, is for the county commissioners to appoint a superintendent of construction who has acquaintance with bridge building in this country. Such men can be had and it ought to be done.

Tank Irrigation.

To the Editor of THE GAZETTE.

The views presented by Mr. Romero in THE GAZETTE of yesterday, on the subject of tank irrigation, are sustained by the experience of other countries. At Greenock, England, a tank has been formed which is fed by surface drainage alone; yet it supplies 650,000,000 cubic feet of water in a year. The city, in its water works, consumes annually 13,250,000 cubic feet, and the remainder is furnished to two miles, at the rate of 11,000,000 gallons daily. Such tanks could be constructed almost anywhere in the valleys of New Mexico and manufactures be run by the water power they would supply.

Again, nothing has contributed so much to the wondrous fertility of India, as this same system of tank irrigation. In the Mavras Presidency alone, there are at the present time some 43,000 native tanks or artificial lakes, with 30,000 miles of embankment, yielding a yearly revenue of $7,500,000. Some of these tanks are 1,600 years old, some of them cover only a few acres, some have an area of as much as thirty-five square miles, while all contribute to the productivity of one of the most densely populated parts of the world. With our unequalled climate and the virgin richness of our soil, only this system of tank irrigation is needed to make New Mexico, in modern times what Mesopotamia was in days of old.

Localities.

Granstam & McCrillis have executed a nice job in putting up some awnings for a house on the south side of the Plaza.

Dick Newby has sub-rented the house on Seventh street recently moved into by E. P. Simpson. The latter will take rooms at the Occidental hotel, while his family are absent in the states.

The account of the Albuquerque love feast, given in a special dispatch to THE GAZETTE yesterday morning, was prepared by a man on the spot, and was true to the minutest particular, let republicans say what they may to the contrary.

There have been stolen from parties in our city, three four per cent registered bonds, of the issue of July 14, 1870 and January 20, 1871. They are numbers 22,944 and 22,945, for $100 each, and number 1,345, for $500. All parties are cautioned against purchasing these bonds should they be thrown on the market.

The parties mentioned in yesterday's GAZETTE as desiring to secure the position of deputy sheriff, with the ulterior motive of ousting the present police force on the east side, deny that such was their motive. They were solicited to take the position mentioned, and the petition to have them appointed was circulated by others than themselves. The GAZETTE wishes to do no one any injustice, and is always ready to correct any mistake which may have crept into its columns.

This evening is the time appointed for the lecture of Colonel Scott at the Baptist church, for the benefit of the Ladies' Relief society. Colonel Scott is said to be a good talker, and he has selected for his theme a subject in which he is thoroughly at home—"Some Pictures From Bible History and Poetry." No doubt the lecture will be a feast of fact and things. Then, too, there will be music by some of the best talent of our city. Over and above all, the cause itself pleads with everyone for patronage. Let the house be filled tonight.

The rain yesterday was a blessing but not in disguise. Any one could see millions in it as it fell in refreshing copiousness from a cloud canopied sky. A change was wrought in the appearance of nature almost instantaneously. A wave of green seemed to flow over the face of the landscape, in answer to the fall of the shower. If this rain extended to the country, as it appeared to do, the amount of good done will be incalculable. There is no denying it, but New Mexico was suffering from a widespread and severe drought. From a parts of the territory came up the cry of losses from drought, and the cattlemen were so disheartened that it was useless to talk to them on the subject of any business. Every thought was paralyzed by the dread of the drought continuing. Had it done so for only a few weeks longer, the losses of the territory would have been very large. But to all appearances the drought is now ended. From several parts of San Miguel county come encouraging reports of rains on the ranges. It may be that the rainy season has not fully set in, yet, doubtless, there will be no more of the severe drought from which we have been suffering.

PERSONAL.
